

Working with Diversity in Gender and Identity Expression.

A one-day workshop for health professionals and support workers.

This seminar aims to enhance counselling practitioner's knowledge, sensitivity and awareness for working with transgender people. Some of the topics covered will be; awareness of language when referring to trans people, scales of sex and gender, the current DSM gender dysphoria diagnosis, referral requirements for treatment and the World Professional Association for Transgender Health standards. Specifically, this training addresses background information, terms & definitions, diagnosis criteria, the prevalence of gender diversity & aspects of assessment.

This training also includes the different approaches required depending on the age of the client and the various treatment options available to each including the necessary referrals where indicated. Through teaching, videos and, individual and group activities participants will explore influences on gender and identity, the challenges trans people face and the impact of society on gender identity development and expression.

This workshop is designed to provide a necessary basis for understanding the diversified and unique needs of the trans community and seeks to improve practitioners' personal awareness regarding gender and identity and develop skills and competencies for working with trans youth and adults.

Learning objectives of this workshop:

1. Developing sensitivity regarding the terms and language used by and with people presenting with diversity in gender identity and/or expression.
2. Recognising diversity in gender identity & expression and respond appropriately.
3. Identifying the needs of trans clients.
4. Addressing the challenges and pressures trans people face.
5. Understanding the demands on practitioners working with trans people.
6. Being aware of the different approaches required for children, adolescents & adults.
